

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26, 1870.

"The Revolution." It must not be supposed, because public attention has not for a long while been attracted to this weekly newspaper, named as The Revolution, that it is altogether extinct, and every now and then does not give start sufficiently lively to prove that it still boasts such a possession as a pulse. Of late, however, its course has not been consistently onward and upward and true to the mark. It has been changing hands, and the process of changing hands is not prone to improve the consistency with which a newspaper speaks by any one time. Mrs. Shephard, a strong-brained woman, conducted it editorially. When she was disposed of, the ambitious and industrious Eleanor Kirk took "a hoit." When she was displaced the poetical-practical Phoebe Cary was placed up to the editorial chair of thorns, and commenced her duties with an energy which went to prove either that she was a most enthusiastic worker or knew nothing at all about the task she was called upon to perform. No one that has ever conversed with Phoebe Cary can doubt that she is both a poetess and a practical woman—with enough of the liberal and sympathetic temperament to appreciate the sphere that women ought to hold in the world, and yet sufficiently practical to understand what difficulties lie in the way of their obtaining the position that is their due. Yet even she has been inadequate to the task of editing The Revolution—and no wonder when such a conceded and pragmatical old maid as Theodore Tilton is at the head of it. The author of "The Lotus Sanctuary" will now, for a while at least, have the reins all to himself.

Mutual Cards. Of course both Mr. Fisk and Mr. Maretzek have cards out, and each claims the victory in the late encounter with lists. If Mr. Fisk's account be correct, however, and Mr. Maretzek's reputation by means proves the account to be incorrect—Mr. Fisk is much to be pitied and Mr. Maretzek much to be blamed. The substance of Fisk's statement is that Maretzek was in receipt from him of $100 per week, and that he was to receive, besides, ten per cent. of the proceeds of the operative venture. In spite of the liberality of this arrangement, Fisk insists that Maretzek has defrauded him out of nearly $5000 by appropriating discounts which he had no right to appropriate. Thus the steamship company, in consideration of the large number of passengers composing the opera-bouffe troupe, allowed a discount of 20 per cent. from regular rates, and gave Maretzek his own passage free. Fisk maintains, however, that in the bills which Maretzek sent in he deducted only 5 per cent. discount of 20, and charged, moreover, $15 for his own passage home. Now Mr. Maretzek was never supposed to be a saint. His worst friends never brought that to his account, and the punctuality with which he has not paid his newspaper debts has rendered the press rather unfriendly toward him. Still he has had an opportunity of making his own statements appear good.

Madame Seebach. Last night Madame Marie Seebach-Niemann, the German tragedienne, made her first appearance in America. The affair took place at the French theatre in West Fourteenth street, the play was Faust, Madame Seebach's role was "Gretchen," and the audience, which was exceedingly enthusiastic, was mainly composed of Germans. Still a good many Americans were among them. During the performance a collision was served up to the new-comer, people, though I hope this fact will not account for the unpopularity of the good opinions in the papers this morning. It would be a pity to think that praise could be bought with a fried oyster, and disparagement warred off by a glass of champagne. To speak the truth, however, briefly, she is indeed a most exquisite actress. The idiotic Herold, which never writes an intelligent line about anything artistic, says that she is better than Rachel, Ristori, and Janaschek combined. The World, Times, and Tribune are rather more discreet in their opinion. Her face belongs to a class that one does not often see, for it combines strength and sweetness to a most unusual extent. She sustained the dignity of her art by not endeavoring to create any startling points. Her one point was to create the character. More of her, however, another time.

The Dry-Goods Trade. The wholesale dry-goods trade of New York has thus far during the present month been extremely active, the principal trade having been with the South and West. A good many buyers near home have been in the market, though but little business has as yet been done with them. The season is rather too early for that. The business of the commission dry-goods houses has been particularly large. City retailers have not, however, laid in their fall stock yet, but it is only telling the truth to admit that they expect a very active season. Last week the dry-goods trade here was particularly heavy, and a good many dry-goods merchants assert that that week was the busiest of the entire year. Let us hope, therefore, that the business activity of the autumn season will be larger than what we have had for several seasons past.

THE COMMITTEE OF DEFENSE.

From the Stable Economist.

The new Government of France was made according to custom. By long and painful experience, France has attained to the habit of calling a routine in revolutions. First, the old Government breaks down, and every one sees it must fall; then the sitting Assembly—the Corps Legislatif, the Chamber of Deputies, or whatever be the name at the time—votes that the Government shall go and begins to occupy itself with the various substitutes; it entertains such and such motions, and hears Model can be seen at TELEGRAPH OFFICE COOPER'S POINT, N.
